Purpose

This portfolio features all the projects and assignments that were completed this spring semester in the Intro to Web Development course. The Midterm project was a reiteration of the craigslist website. We had a choice to redesign and restructure the whole website, according to how we felt as helpful. The Final project was a chance to make a website about whatever we wanted, with anything ranging from a quiz website, to a game website.

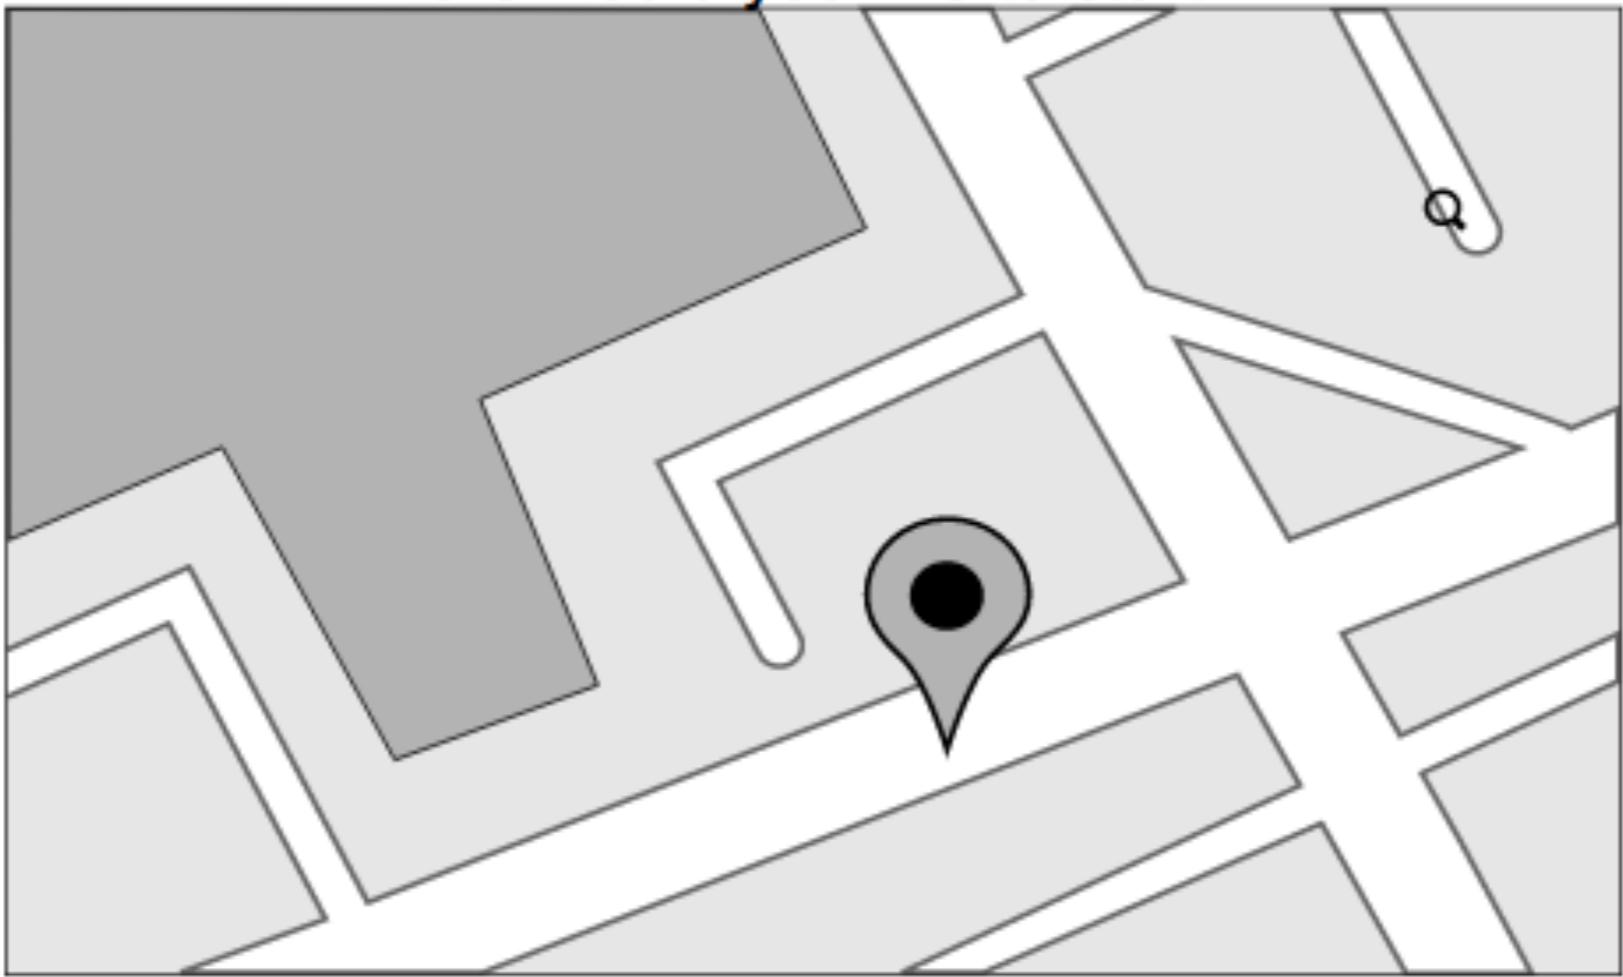

Midterm: Analysis

The original drive behind my redesign for craigslist was to make the site easier to use, and to supply users with the ability to efficiently search for the information they want in a manageable and organized way. My biggest gripe about the craigslist website was that it revealed way too much information on the first page. My hope was to fix its poor maneuverability and transform the interface into something that makes navigating easier. I added a few new features, particularly the map. I noticed that it was very difficult to find and establish your location on craigslist through the small links that were provided. It was especially inconvenient when you wanted to change your location, while you were searching, especially when the location you wanted was significantly farther from where you said you initially started. The map is now accessible while searching, so you can spontaneously shift at a moment's notice, no matter where you are in the page. The last feature I added was the content page. When it comes to web surfing, especially with google, I find myself clicking on links that have nothing to do with the content i actually want. Sometimes the title may not be enough, so I formatted the offers in a way that showcases the first few lines of the information, the title, and a small photo. The audience of this website is generally geared toward those who love easy navigation and those enjoy visuals, and those enjoy navigating with maps.

Final Project:

For my project, I decided to make a Personality Quiz website. Based on the choices that you choose, you will be assigned a food, with a given explanation of why you were chosen as that food. The entire website follows a sort of choice map as well, where each choice you make brings you to a specific route, until you reach to the end of the route (where there you will be assigned a food).

Imagine yourself being somewhere else.

Have a conversation or two with someone

Food Personality Quiz

Congratulations, you are a BURRITO.

So you're a burrito. You're everyone's guilty pleasure. You are a very 'layered' and complex person, and you have a lot to offer. You're great to hang out with every once in a while, you are a good friend.
